The concert pianist

This intriguing rondeau is marked vivement (lively), but this should not be taken as an excuse to hurry. Curiously, the highest note encountered in this piece is G above middle C, and Couperin makes us wait until the second couplet (or verse) even for this brief excursion. Enjoy the cheerful banter between the hands – on a harpsichord this would sound almost hypnotic. The left hand is the music’s rudder: let it steer you purposefully – but remain gentle or the music will turn into a kind of Baroque ragtime!
