How refreshing to come across a carol which celebrates unconventional rhythms and dissonances! Don't be foxed by the out-of-step time signatures at bars 14 and 18 – this is Bartók's way of showing that a  $\frac{5}{4}$  bar can be emphasised differently between the hands simultaneously, an effect that is great fun to play once you've mastered the coordination. Revel in the shimmering diminuendo chords from bar 34 to the end – a rare opportunity to showcase feathery wrist staccato – let these chords glisten like the evening snow in a Romanian pine forest.
